Diamond Blackfan Anaemia (DBA) is a rare bone marrow failure disorder usually diagnosed before 12 months of age but can present in later life. DBA patients fail to produce red blood cells properly and will need treatment ranging from monthly blood transfusions to regular steroid treatment, and in some cases bone marrow transplant.

DBA UK aim to deliver support, research and hope to the DBA community in the UK by bringing families together, communicating the latest medical information and funding research into causes and cures.
